

Weekly Safety Meeting Horseplay

Date:	Jobsite:
-------	----------

Discussion Leader:	Summary
Discussion Ecuaci.	Nearly everyone has heard a practical joker say "This one is gonna kill ya." Well, hopefully it never will. However, practical jokes invite
Attendance Sign- In:	danger. The building trades industry is potentially dangerous and anything that unnecessarily increases the chance of an injury must be Attendance sign- in:	eliminated. Horseplay benefits no one and usually only builds up resentment and fosters retaliation. Practical jokes should be discouraged. At some point, if they continue they need to be reported.
	Guide for Discussion
	Examples of Horseplay
	Scaring someone.
	Air hosing someone.
	Wrestling with someone.
	Boxing.
	Goosing.
	Dropping objects next to someone.
	Throwing water on someone.
·	Throwing objects or tools at someone.
	Placing tacks under someone.
	Additional Discussion Notes:
	Can you think of other examples of horseplay?
	Can you think of other examples of horseplay:
	What are the adverse (bad) consequences of horseplay?
	When is it appropriate to report horseplay to supervisors?
	Remember
	Practical jokers cannot guarantee the success of their jokes. They can guarantee that they increase the chance of an accident occurring.
	Imagine a joke that backfires, resulting in an injury or death to a co-worker. Do you want any part of that? It's easy enough to get hurt on the job as it is. Let's not increase anyone's chances.
	the job as it is, been not intereste unyone a chances.